Klaus-Uwe Panther is Professor Emeritus of English Linguistics at the University of Hamburg, Germany. In 2004 he was a founding member of the German Cognitive Linguistics Association and served as its president (2004–2008). He also was the president of the International Cognitive Linguistics Association (2005–2007). He has been a keynote speaker at various international conferences and a visiting scholar at Indiana University (Bloomington), the University of California (Berkeley), the University Michel de Montaigne (Bordeaux, France), Eötvös Loránd University (Budapest, Hungary), and the University of La Rioja (Logroño, Spain). In 2007, he was granted an Honorary Professorship by the International Studies University in Xi'an (China). From 2012 to 2014 he served as Distinguished Visiting Professor at Nanjing Normal University (China). His research interests include cognitive linguistics and pragmatics, with a special focus on the interaction of grammatical structure and conceptual-pragmatic meaning. Since the mid-1990s, he has collaborated and published widely with Linda L. Thornburg, especially on the centrality of conceptual metonymy as a motivational factor in language structure and use. His most recent monograph (co-authored with Linda Thornburg) is Motivation and Inference: A cognitive linguistic approach (2017, Shanghai Foreign Language Education Press).

Linda L. Thornburg holds a B.A. in English Literature and an M.A. in English as a Foreign Language from Southern Illinois University (1967, 1977), and a Ph.D. in Linguistics from the University of Southern California (1984). She has taught at California State University, Fresno; Eötvös Loránd University, Budapest, where she was a Fulbright Scholar (1990–1991), lecturer (1992–1998), and associate professor (1998–1999); Hamburg University; and Southern Illinois University. Her early publications focused on the interaction of semantics, pragmatics, and morphosyntactic change in early English. In the mid-1990s she began collaborating with Klaus Panther and together they have produced over 30 articles on conceptual metonymy, cognitive pragmatics (speech act constructions), cognitive morphology, grammatical constructions, and grammatical and lexical aspect. They have presented their work in twenty-two countries. In 2003 their co-edited volume Metonymy and Pragmatic Inferencing was published by John Benjamins; in 2009 their co-edited volume with Antonio Barcelona Metonymy and Metaphor in Grammar appeared in the Benjamins book series Human Cognitive Processing, of which they have been the series editors since 2010, producing twenty-nine collective volumes and fifteen monographs to date.
